第一篇：

A notable motto goes "Knowledge is a treasure, but practice is the key to it", which means that one should do everything through practice instead of just sticking to theory. If we take heed of idealistic situation in textbook, ignoring practice, it will be superficial for us to cognize the world.

Taking a look around, we can find numerous examples to demonstrate. The best illustration might be English study. Without a good command of pronunciation or face-to-face communication, we never hope to master English in an effective way. Chewing countless vocabularies in the dictionary, or scrutinizing innumerable celebrities' classics in occident literature history, will make no sense at all if we still remain silence when speaking to foreigners. So, we need to practice ourselves via publicizing well-polished thesis or delivering impromptu speech on the stage to make knowledge we get valuable.

In short, we should utilize what we learned to cherish the knowledge we treasure, or it will become the garbage we squander. And remember, practice makes perfect.

When it comes to the topic of doing great things, everybody has his own interpretation. An inspiration idea goes that "if you cannot do great things, do small things in great way", which goes to mean that we are supposed to hit the importance of doing small things in a great way before undertaking something big.

From Kobe Bryant, we can obviously and easily get that he frequently takes great pains to be more powerful, strong and even aggressive on the court when he was firstly entered the NBA in 1996 due to his ambition to do great things in his life. But, during his early career, he is still a role player on the bench in Los Angeles Lakers. Astonishingly, he never fails to bear in mind that doing small things in a great way is a key to great things, so possessing a good habit of doing small things in a great method; he manages to become a legendary basketball player. More importantly, He has been an inspiration so far to people in China and throughout the world. For a life which symbolizes the triumph of human spirit, but it is more than that, he was awarded the MVP title in 2007-2008 NBA season .His basketball career, though tough, is definitely rewarding.

That's a life worth living.

In line with my personal thinking, I firmly believe that if we lack of doing small things in a great way, we will find it hard to thrive, even survive, in this fiercely competitive society. Simply put, without small steps, one cannot cover a thousand-mile journey; without small streams, there cannot be oceans or seas. (太原新东方 李云飞)

第三篇:

The Albert Einstein's famous remark "I have no special talents. I am only passionately curious" is meaningful and quite thought-provoking./ The saying tries to tell us that curiosity plays a dominate role in achieving success./Many reasons can be collected to give reasonable explanations for my understanding.

Simply put, adopting curious attitude towards everything is a good way to exercise the mind and promote new ways of thinking about the world around us. It can serve as an efficient instrument to make us smarter, more energetic, more creative, more sociable and more open to new experiences and ways of thinking. Moreover, those equipped with curiosity are always admired and respected , because it can endow them with more creativity and competitive ability in the increasingly intense social competition. Here are some of the endless numbers of illustrations that can testify the righteousness of my understanding. Since the earliest days, Chinese people have sought to explore the moon. After a long period of hardworking, the program of Chinese lunar exploration satellite has achieved great success. For example, the Chang'e-3 lunar probe is the first moon lander launched in the 21st century.

In my sentiment, curiosity does play a positive role in the accomplishment of success. It is high time that we should nurture children's curiosity in school teaching. Only in this way can youngsters better adapt to the rapid development of society.
