原创范文：

From the proverb 'knowledge is a treasure, but practice is the key to it', we can infer that without practical application, the power of knowledge cannot be stimulated. The inference is grounded in the following two points. (38)

First and foremost, in this modern society with intensive competition, not only is a decent qualification required as a certification of knowledge one has acquired, but also practical skills are paid increasing attachment, especially when you are searching for a satisfying occupation. This is because any enterprise runs in various practical operations such as communicating with customers in diverse personalities. It is hard to imagine a man just knowing rules for communication can perform the communicating task perfectly. Besides, if knowledge is regarded as a treasure, which means people are supposed to use them rather than just save them, as if a millionaire possessed huge quantities of assets but he or she did not know how to spend it, then what is the significance of this treasure. (127)

All in all, any one surviving in this realistic world should live with more practical skill that is converted from literal information. Whoever gets the key to treasure can really enjoy a wealthy life. (34) saying “I have no special talents. I am only passionately curious” You can give an example or two to illustrate your point of view. You should write at least 150 words but no more than 200 words.

Directions: for this part, you are allowed 30 minutes to write an essay concerning the following

From the proverb ‘I have no special talents. I am only passionately curious’, we can infer that not every one is born with certain gift, but curiosity can lead a person to a profound cognition as well. The inference is grounded in the following two points. (46)

Firstly, the absolute majority of people in this planet are just ordinary who tend to be devoid of certain talents. However, this does not necessarily mean they cannot make any achievement, because the god equally gives every one of his citizens the gift to be curious, which is a key to actively discovering or carefully studying. For example, with such a curiosity, humans explore ways to approach the outer space including the Moon as well as the Mars. Besides, inquisitiveness drives a man to make progress in exploration. For instance, every time we encounter a trouble or question, the first reaction must be to ask for excellent experts or professional websites, during which period interest comes as an additional motivation to further progress. (123)

In conclusion, talent is a random factor to be excellent, but curiosity is doomed to trigger the potential of a person, which is another way to be successful in life. (30)

Part I

Writing

Directions: for this part, you are allowed 30 minutes to write an essay concerning the following saying “If you cannot do great things. Do small things in a great way.” You can give an example or two to illustrate your point of view. You should write at least 150 words but no more than 200 words.

From the proverb ‘If you cannot do great things, do small things in a great way’, we can infer that something great can be defined both from the result and from the process, that is to say, we can define contribution or success from different aspects. (46)

Firstly, not every one is entrusted with capability to deal with great things, but this does not necessarily mean one cannot make any personal or cooperative achievement. Great things are always complicated and composed of many different tasks. Therefore, only when every small component is done in a great way, the final desired outcomes could be harvested as a whole. Besides, if the task taker can always finish his or her work in a creative and fabulous way, then something great can also be realized someday as he or she continues to accumulate such experience. So the first step or the first ability one should possess is to do small thing in a great way. (115)

All in all, individuals' personal capacity is arranged with appropriate social responsibility accordingly, which means someone is born to change the whole world like Steven Jobs while others are born to change one's own world like every ordinary individual. (39)
