

Learning is a daily experience and lifetime learning

In this constantly changing world, how to achieve lifelong learning has aroused public concern. As a proverb goes, “Learning is a daily experience and a lifelong mission”. Without a doubt, the saying aims to deliver the message that learning is a continuous process and can continue throughout a person’s life.

Many reasons could be collected to give convincing explanations for my points. Learning is more than a person sitting at a desk and studying a book. What we do in daily life is a result of what we have learned. In order to better face abundant challenges in our life journey, we need to keep progressing and never stop learning. It is universally acknowledged that lifelong learning brings us numerous benefits. A case in point is that for many undergraduates the success in passing CET4 and CET6 doesn’t mean they have mastered English and can apply it to daily use. If they want to be proficient in it, they need to work day in and day out, almost to the point of addiction, and over a long period of time in their life. Without the ability to keep learning, how could it be possible for us to expect a better life?

Taking into account what has been argued, we can come to the conclusion that it is of great necessity to strive for lifelong learning. As for ourselves, we ought to take practical actions to keep pursuing further education. If we can study throughout our life, our future will become more desirable.
