北京新东方学校陈科

Being overly concerned about their children 's academic performance, Chinese parents always keep their children away from housework. All they aspire from their children is diligent learning, a good grade and thus being enrolled by a leading university. Due to the intense competition in China, only great academic performance is the sure way to success. Besides, Chinese parents hold that they will be respected if their children are the high-achievers in society. No wonder their time, hobbies and interests are sacrificed for providing a better condition for their children.
