B

As we know,laughter (笑) is better than crying. Something life is hard. But whenever it is, we should laugh to life, because laughter is the best medicine (药). Scientists are beginning to think it's right. They are studying laughter seriously and they find it is really good for us.

So what happens when we laugh? We use fifteen different muscles(肌肉)in our face. And laughing is good for every organ (器官) in our body. For example, when we laugh, our heart beat (心跳) gets slower and our brain makes a natural painkiller (止痛药). When we laugh, we breathe quickly and exercise the face, shoulder and chest. Our blood pressure goes down, and our circulation (循环) gets better.

Every minute we laugh is the same as forty-five minutes of relaxation (放松). Many doctors around the world believe that laughter helps us get better when we are sick.

Of course, there are many kinds of laughter. We may change the ways we laugh in different situations. How do you usually laugh?

C

Once there was a boy. He loves candies very much. He always asked his father for candies.

The boy's father thought hard about how to stop the child from asking for so many candies. A great man lived nearby. The boy's father wanted to take the boy to him. He could make the child give up (放弃) candies.

So they went to the great man. The father asked the great man to help him. But the great man liked candies himself (他自己). He told the father to bring his son back after a month.

In this month, the great man tried to give up eating candies. At last he did it. When the boy and his father came back after a month, the great man had a talk with the boy. From then on, the boy did not ask for candies any more.

The boy's father felt surprised, "Why didn't you ask my son to give up candies when we came to you a month ago?"

The man answered, "How could I ask a boy to give up candies when I loved candies myself? In the last month I gave up eating candies."

A person's example (榜样) is always more important than words. We should not ask others to do what we can't do ourselves.
