Respect others, and you will be respected.

There is folk adage that “respect others, and you will be respected”. Namely, whatever you do and wherever you are, every individual should respect with each other. It is widely acknowledged that your behaviors decide whether you can be respected.

There may be a combination of factors which are responsible for the phenomenon. Initially, respecting others is the Chinese traditional virtue that should be developed. That is, we shouldn't neglect it during growing up. Additionally, respecting others is the necessary etiquette in our life that we should bear in mind. Eventually, it is a kind of way to broaden our relationships. Respecting with each other is beneficial to interpersonal communication.

As for me, if we want to be respected by others, we should respect others first. So it is imperative for us to give top priority to the issue. For one thing, we should appeal to the public to raise the awareness of respecting others. For another, mass media shall play an active role in keeping the whole society well informed of the Chinese traditional virtues, especially respecting with others. Only in this way, can we create a harmonious society.
