Recently, a video challenge(挑战)“Four Generations(代、辈)”, is very popular online. It shows the structure(结构) of a Chinese family—from young children to great-grandparents.

In these videos, a little boy or girl calls for their mother or father. The parent smiles and calls for the grandparent. Finally, the grandparent calls for the great-grandparent! These videos show how much Chinese people love their family.

In many Chinese families, some generations live together. This is called an extended family(大家庭). Usually it is “four-two-one”—four grandparents, two parents and one child.

This family structure has both good and bad sides(方面). When parents are busy with work, grandparents can help take care of the children. But some people say grandparents love their grandchildren too much and let them eat too much.

Life can be both sweet and bitter(苦). Family life is the same. But the most important thing is that family is all about love.
