The use of translation apps is becoming increasingly popular. People from all walks of life would put different interpretations on this phenomenon. It is undoubtedly that translation apps are under broad usage, especially among the people living in big cities.

There are many factors that may account for this result, but the following are the most typical ones. Above all, the rapid progress of globalization leads to more frequent international communications, which enhances the demand of translation apps in the society. Furthermore, people, especially youngsters in big cities, get used to cope with every issue with smart phones. Naturally, when it comes to a problem of language, they will pull out the phones from their pockets, and click on one of the icons of various translation apps. Last but not least, scientific and technological advancement is the guarantee of accurate translation for the users, creating a sticky application.

Taking into account of all these factors, it is of great significance in making use of translation apps selectively and appropriately. Only in this way can we keep our mind clear and develop our own critical thinking all the time.
