【范文】

The use of translation apps is becoming increasingly popular. Recent advances in technology have made it easier for people to translate through various apps. Although translation apps can bring some benefits to people, there are also a host of caveats that they should bear in mind.

First, as is often the case with apps, some errors can be found in translation on grounds of technological limits, which may cause the confusion among users. Apart from that, precision to some extent has to be compromised as context and cultural differences of translation are not taken into account by apps, thus the exact intention cannot often be conveyed. Last but not least, with the widespread access to apps, people tend to ignore the acquisition of necessary language knowledge.

To conclude, translation apps can be of great help to us only if we use them as auxiliary tools without relying on them entirely.
