例文:

With the background of high technology, there has been a growing tendency that people tend to finish daily things by means of apps in smart phones, which brings much convenience to their life. In fact, using translation apps has become increasingly prevailing among individuals. However, attitudes towards this tendency vary from person to person.

A majority of users commit the notion that it is exceedingly beneficial for them to search words and translate sentences by these apps, in that a bridge can be created between them and foreign languages as well as speakers in a limited period. In addition, some people knowing little knowledge and culture about other countries will feel relaxed and comfortable when they are taking a vacation overseas. On the contrary, a minority of people claim that relying on translation apps too much exerts adverse impact on learners' independence and practical ability, leading to the lower working effects in the near future. What's more, misunderstanding may happen when speakers express themselves with lack of authentic feelings.

From my personal perspective, the benefits of translation apps far outweigh their disadvantages. What users had better do is to take advantage of these apps and tools wisely in the process of communication and writing practice.
