A school did a survey among 1000 students about their attitudes towards exams. Here are the results. Five-eight percent students think exams are good for study. Nine-one percent students think exams are not the only way to judge a student. And only twenty-six think exams can cause stress. In my view, it' s not the only way to judge a student, we should face exams properly.

I don't think exams are important. Students have different abilities and some of them can't be measured by exams, such as creativity and the ability to communicate and act. All in all, exams can be a way to measure students' achievements in schoolwork. However, different interests and abilities can make a student a full man.
