Too many people want others to be their friends, but they don't give friendship back. That is why some friendships don't last very long. 56 You must learn to treat(对待) your friend the way you want your friend to treat you. Learning to be a good friend means learning three rules: be true; be generous(慷慨的); be understanding.

Being true is where a good friendship starts. 57 If you don't tell the truth, people usually find out. Then you may lose your friend's trust.

Generosity means sharing. You don't have to give your lunch money or your clothes. But you have to learn how to share things you like — your hobbies and interests. 58 These can be meaningful to a friend. They tell your friend what is important to you. Then your friend can know you better.

Everyone needs help with a problem. Talking about the problem can make it easier to solve. 59 You must try to put yourself in your friend's place so you can understand the problem better.

60 But all true friendships have three things in common. If you plan to keep your friendships, you must practice being true, generous and understanding.

- A. So you must listen and understand.
 B. Good friends need to trust each other.
 C. To have a friend, you must learn to be one.
 D. No two friendships are ever exactly similar.
 E. You will also want to share your ideas and feelings.
